

COOLIDGE SEES BROOKLYN SUNDAY SCHOOLS PARADE

5,000 Take Part in 92d Annual Turnout in All Parts of Borough.

The Sunday School children of Brooklyn, 125,000 of them, paraded this morning in twenty-six divisions, each with a separate line of march, so that every section of the borough saw some part of the demonstration.

Vice President Coolidge and Postmaster General Hays were among those who reviewed the great procession—not all of it, but as many divisions as they could. It was the annual parade of the Brooklyn Sunday School Union.

Other notables in the various reviewing parties were John W. Wacker, James W. Gerard, United States Senators Calder and Odell and many local officials. All the public schools were closed.

The Reception Committee included Chief Marshal W. S. Houston, F. H. Womb, John H. Merling, Robert L. Hays, John A. Roy Jr., John F. Lange and Alex Tilly. At the conclusion of the luncheon the guests were divided into reviewing parties and carried in automobiles to the various divisions which they were assigned.

Vice President Coolidge, Postmaster General Hays, Mr. Wamaker and several of the more prominent persons were driven to Prospect Park, where they reviewed a division consisting of forty schools, numbering more than 10,000 boys and girls.

County Organization Heads to Confer for "Good of Party."

SYRACUSE, June 9.—Democratic leaders from all up-State counties are expected to attend a conference here today called "to discuss a number of things for the good of the party and the good of the State."

William H. Kelley, leader of the Onondaga County Democratic organization, last night issued the following statement: "It is evident that some people have misunderstood or misinterpreted the significance of the Democratic conference to be held tomorrow. There is no quarrel between the up-State and the down-State. We are not for or against any one State Chairman and the matter of a Chairman may not come up at all."

Author's Boy Rescue Drowning Child at Cambridge, Mass.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 9.—Owen J. Wister of Philadelphia, son of the well known author, yesterday risked his life to save fourteen-year-old John McGish of Allston from drowning in the Charles River. Wister jumped overboard and after two dives succeeded in rescuing him.

Wister, a sophomore at Harvard, was rowing on the Charles, McGish, with a companion, was swimming from the Cambridge side of the river to Allston. He either became exhausted or was caught in the weeds in eight feet of water. His companion, seeing the youth disappear, cried for assistance. Wister responded. The youngster was taken to the Cambridge Hospital. He was sent home later. The elder Wister is an overseer at Harvard.

WANT TO LIVE LONG, GIRLS?

Wed Once and Once Only, Advice of Pittsburgh Woman, Aged 102.

PITTSBURGH, Pa. June 9.—A clear conscience and the fact that she restricted herself to one husband have been the chief reasons for her having reached the age of 102 years, Mrs. Maria E. Wilson of Osgood Street said yesterday in connection with the celebration of the second birthday in her second century of life.

"I have lived to be the oldest woman in Pittsburgh because my conscience never has troubled me and because, though I was left a widow at twenty-six, I did not marry again," said Mrs. Wilson. "I believe in one husband for one woman, although that doesn't seem to be the style now."

Mrs. Wilson has retained her faculties and talks brightly of current events. She believes in Woman Suffrage, but takes little interest in politics.
